Jean-Charles Simon discusses the role and priorities of Paris EUROPLACE within the World Alliance of Financial Centers (WAIFC) and presents the new branch of Paris EUROPLACE, the Sustainable Finance Institute.

What are the ambitions of Paris EUROPLACE within the WAIFC in terms of sustainable finance?

Paris EUROPLACE has been a founding member of the WAIFC, considering how decisive a global and coordinated action could be to address some collective challenges. Specifically, sustainable finance is probably the most urgent and complex priority international financial centers have now to tackle.

Following the 2015 Paris Agreement and the creation of a dedicated branch (‘Finance for Tomorrow’) within Paris EUROPLACE in 2017, we would like to deepen exchanges of best practices within the WAIFC and to coordinate our domestic efforts to contribute, along with policymakers, companies, and individuals, to find effective and mutually-agreed solutions to this worldwide issue.

In our view, many topics could now be seen from this sustainable angle, both at a micro and macroeconomic level: financing the real economy, enhancing the prosperity of our societies, or encouraging new technologies and innovation should now all be analyzed through this sustainable lens. Therefore, the WAIFC is probably one of the best scenes to discuss, assess and learn from each other from our national experiences. Indeed, thanks to their far-reaching positioning, international financial centers could leverage the global nature of the WAIFC to better share their views and policy recommendations on this acute issue.

Paris Europlace has launched the “Sustainable Finance Institute”. Could you tell us more about the objectives?

The Sustainable Finance Institute (SFI) will be a specific branch of Paris EUROPLACE, prolonging the activities conducted so far by Finance for Tomorrow and at the same time amplifying its missions. It follows one of the recommendations included in the report presented last March by Yves Perrier, Amundi Chairman, and Paris EUROPLACE co-vice-President, to Bruno Le Maire, Minister of the Economy.

Meeting France’s 2050 net zero goal requires additional resources to be given to the Paris financial center and specific orientations to be proposed to the economic players. As a result, the SFI will closely follow the policy choices indicated by public authorities and simultaneously coordinate the way large companies and other professionals face the multi-faceted challenge of sustainable development.

Among the objectives set for the SFI, tasks ranking high on its 2023 agenda include the strengthening of CO2 accounting (relying on the work done by both the EFRAG and the ISSB), the uniformization of assessment methodologies, the definition of an appropriate framework for the management and the governance of the CO2 externality, but also probably new training, financial products or services and labels to promote innovative practices in Paris.
We will be happy to present in due time the outcome and the achievements of this new SFI to all WAIFC members interested in sharing national experiences in that area.

Opinion of Thomas Krantz: The Big Picture: Economic Policy Lessons for 2023

Thomas Krantz, our Advisor to the Managing Director, examines a working paper composed by the Yale University Program on Financial Stability, published for the G30.

The paper was an edited roundtable amongst five of the most distinguished current and past policy leaders. Each one of their policy reviews is summarized in Krantz's opinion.

"This year-end reflection period may be unusual, because in many ways it is the first three years of the decade that together create the timespan that matters. We might draw a line of before and after Covid."
